On April 29, 1944, Shoghi Effendi, head of the Baha'i Faith, left the United States after a seven-year stay. During his time in America, Shoghi Effendi had a profound impact on the Baha'i community, guiding its growth and development in the country.

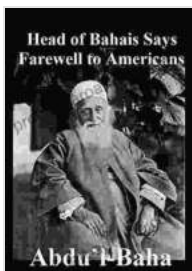

Shoghi Effendi was born in Acre, Palestine, in 1897. He was the great-grandson of Baha'u'llah, the founder of the Baha'i Faith. Shoghi Effendi was appointed head of the Baha'i Faith in 1921, at the age of 24.

Shoghi Effendi's arrival in the United States in 1937 was a momentous occasion for the Baha'i community in America. At the time, there were only a few thousand Baha'is in the country. During his seven-year stay, Shoghi Effendi traveled extensively throughout the United States, visiting Baha'i communities and giving talks. He also oversaw the construction of the Baha'i House of Worship in Wilmette, Illinois, which was completed in 1953.

Shoghi Effendi's teachings had a profound impact on the Baha'i community in America. He emphasized the importance of unity, service, and education. He also urged Baha'is to be involved in the life of their communities and to work for the betterment of society.

Shoghi Effendi's leadership was instrumental in the growth and development of the Baha'i community in America. He helped to establish the Baha'i Faith as a recognized religion in the country and to create a strong and vibrant Baha'i community.

When Shoghi Effendi left the United States in 1944, he left behind a legacy of faith, unity, and service. His teachings and leadership continue to inspire Baha'is in America and around the world.
