The Christmas tree legend

A beautifully decorated evergreen tree, with coloured lights, clothes warm memories of Christmas. The Christmas tree has become one of the most beloved and well-known holiday symbols.

The custom of a Christmas tree, undecorated, is believed to have begun in Germany in the first half of the 700s.

The history of the modern Christmas tree goes back to 16th century Germany. In a story (Elsass), dated 1601, states that the burghers shall have for Christmas more than one bush of more than eight shoes' length. The decorations hung on a tree in that time were "made out of many-colored paper, apples, wafers, and sugar." Around Strasbourg there was a widespread practice of bringing trees into houses for decoration during Christmastide. The modern custom is also connected with the Paradise tree hung with apples, present in the national-religious myth. The decorations could symbolize the Garden of Eden. In 17th century the Christmas tree spread through Germany and Scandinavia. The tree was extensively decorated, first with candles and candies, then with apples and confections.

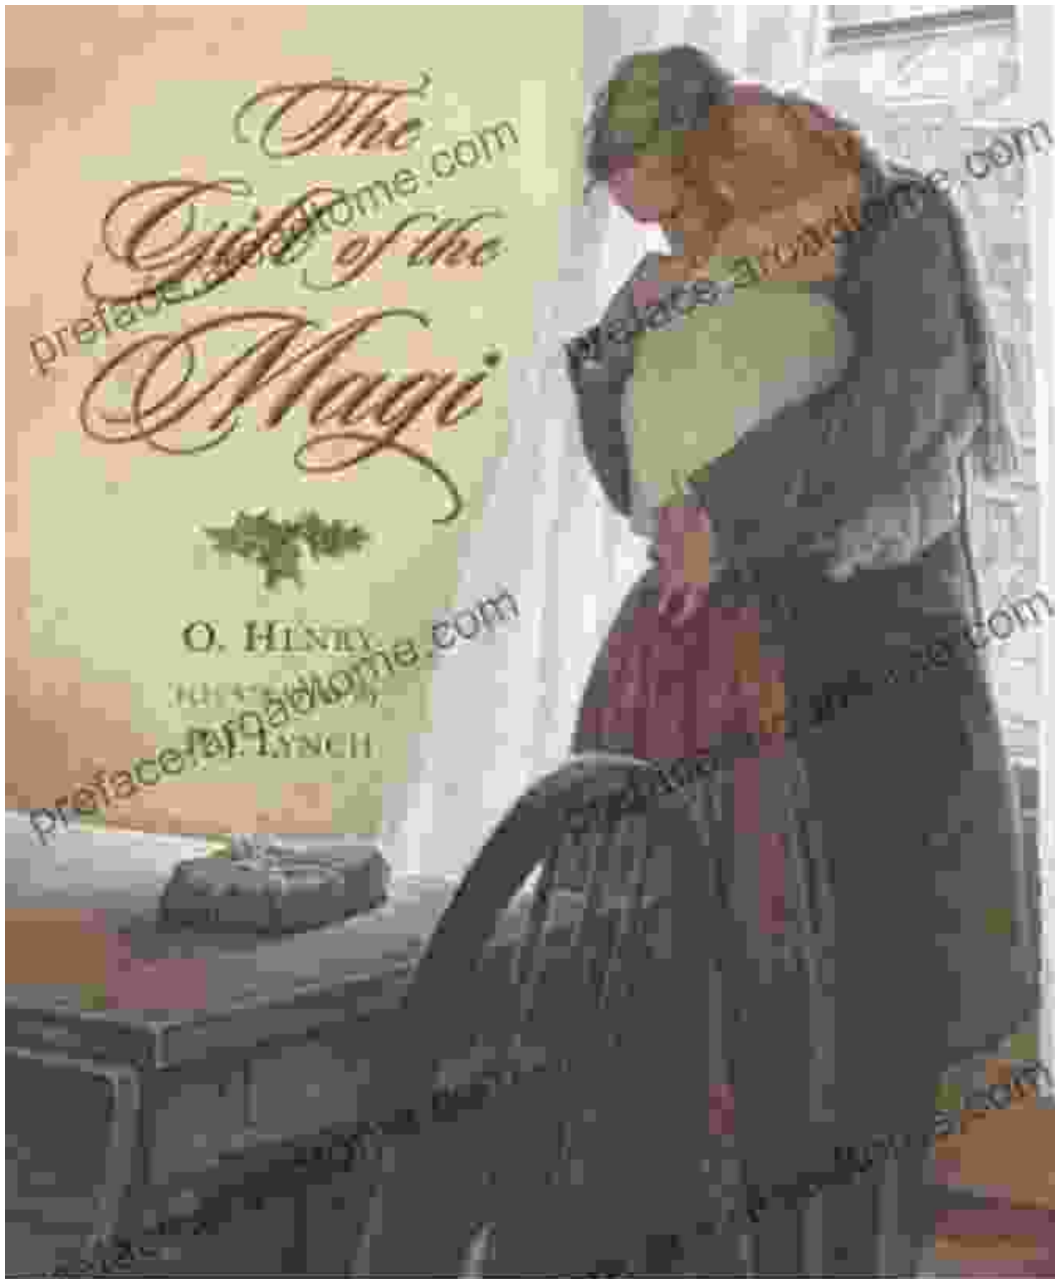

It is believed that Martin Luther, the Protestant reformer, was the first to light a Christmas tree with candles. While coming home one dark winter's night near Christmas, he was struck with the beauty of the starlight shining through the branches of a small fir tree outside his home. He duplicated the starlight by using candles attached to the branches of his indoor Christmas tree.

In England the tradition was made popular by the German Prince Albert, husband of Queen Victoria. The German immigrants brought the Christmas tree to America in 17th century.
